PUBLICATION GUIDELINES:

We ask contributors to submit two (2) typed copies, following the format (on such issues as references and notes) of articles in this issue of TRANSFORMATION. Whilst the journal will cater for work at any level of abstraction, or detail, a number of criteria will guide the editors in selection of material for inclusion. Articles should aim for academic rigour but also clarify the political implications of the issues discussed. We are concerned not to compete with other South African journals that may cover related ground but in different ways - this will govern our selection principles. All articles will be assessed anonymously by the referees. Contributions should preferably not exceed the following lengths:

Analytical articles: 7 000 words

Debates and review articles: 3 000 words

The views expressed in TRANSFORMATION do not necessarily reflect those of the editors.

- RE-FORMING THE POST-APARTHEID STATE? 1
CITIZENSHIP AND RURAL DEVELOPMENT IN CONTEMPORARY SOUTH AFRICA

WILLIAM MUNRO argues that development literature on South Africa underestimates the importance of the rural development endeavour.. This in turn means promoting an effective state presence in rural areas that can incorporate rural people politically while enabling economic and social development to take place. These two processes must be understood as part of a common hegemonic project of transformation. In examining this theme, a critical gaze at development in KwaZulu-Natal is cast.

- FANCY DRESS: CONCEALMENT AND 30
IDEOLOGY IN SOUTH AFRICA

The role of the traditional in South African politics, particularly in the IFP, is interrogated by JASON MYERS. Myers explores struggles over legitimacy, the use of forms of identity as a means of producing legitimacy and the need to query and expose the reality behind the form.

- THE WOMEN'S STRUGGLE FOR EQUALITY DURING 47
SOUTH AFRICA'S TRANSITION TO DEMOCRACY

SHEILA MEINTJES explores the active promotion of women's issues during the transition period of the early 1990s with a focus on the women's charter movement. If this kind of mobilisation was a necessary component for advancing women's causes, it did not necessarily succeed in sustaining momentum once the transfer of power occurred.

FEMINIST EPISTEMOLOGY AND REPRESENTATION:
THE IMPACT OF POST-MODERNISM AND
POST-COLONIALISM

66

The feminist movement too, argues AMANDA GOUWS, has been affected by the post-modern 'politics of identity' with all-embracing claims being made for experiential legitimacy. Without denying the importance of experience and difference, however, the way towards a more generalised and effective epistemology needs to be found.

BEYOND THE FRONTIER OF CONTROL: TRADE
UNIONISM AND THE LABOUR MARKET IN THE DURBAN DOCKS

83

Transformation has concerned itself in recent years with the prospects for a corporatism that involves a powerful trade union movement. DAVID HEMSON, using the example of a key labour force in Durban, the dockers and looking both at the history of labour mobilisation and the changing face of capital, questions the possibilities for corporatism. He also comments critically on a major chapter in the history of modern South African trade unionism.

Debate

IMPROVING PRODUCTIVITY PERFORMANCE IN SOUTH AFRICA: A RESPONSE TO TREVOR BELL

115

DAVID KAPLAN and DAVID LEWIS defend the position of the Industrial Strategy Project's assessment of productivity in the South African case and project the need for industrial policy, as opposed to a macro-economic policy environment that may merely promote inward industrialisation instead of export expansion and transformation.
